The Chicago World's Fair Commissioners have secured the cordial co-operation of the Pope, who will send exhibits to the exposition of next year and will aid it all he can, among other ways by issuing a pondificial letter in support of it. At a meeting of the Commissioners and Cardinal Rampolla preliminary arrangements have been made with regard to the Pupal exhibit. The antiquarism, the historian, the churchman, the literary man and the artist are interested deeply in the announcement of the Pope's practical interest in the World's Fair at Chicago!

Rampolla, the Pope straight hand man, is a Sicillan forty-eight years old. His attainments are those of the profound theologian and acute diplomatist. In his private-life he is the severe ascelic. He has bee a Papal Secretary of State about five years. conterence.

Branswick Fur Club men had to spend their time Tuesday mostly in telling stories, for successful fox hunting was next to impossible. The party that went out in the morning with eight dogs came back after a short time empty handed. It was impossible to do any hunting on account of the dry Arack. The crust would not show the trace of a fox, and was just thick enough to allow the dogs to sink. Many of the hounds were cut quite badly in this way. However, another party with five dogs started forth for plunder in the afternoon, but without making any captures. L. O. It was illustrutd by stereoptican views, which were taken from photographs obtained by Mr Allen while travelling in that fur distant portion of the world, and they were very fine to effect, adding greatly to the interest of the occasion,
The lecture was the story of a journey on horseback, taken by Mr Allen him more genu ne comfort than the self, the three principal points visited lavanine gar. I y it being the cities of Trebizond, Erseroom, and Van The appearance of the caravan et the beginning of the trip was spoken of, and the fine mountain scenery near I religiond was described. > room in 1890 was given and many historical facts in regard to that city were told Mr Allen spoke of the cunciform in scriptions in Van, which is an ancient city, composed largely of gardens, or more properly orchards—The Varak mon astery near this place received a share of the speaker's attention. The koords, or mountain brigands, were described, and reference was made to Mt Ararut The latter portion of the journey was through the Caucasus country in Russia by means of the "troika," to Bartoum, where a steamer was taken for Constantinople At the close two Armenians who have been here but a short time, appeared in the costume of koordish brigands, and the effect was striking The lecture was finely delivered and was of a highly enjoyable and instructive nature, and the ttention of the audience was closely held by the speaker from beginning to end. The event was under the auspices of the Y P S C E connected with the church, and was well arranged.

Only a little Thing

It is by little things that we form our estimates of character. We may not often have opportunities of judging by notable deeds and valorous action as to the true nature of the acquaintance we castally meet or the companion with whom we walk and work from day to day but triffes are always in the air by which we infer much as to their heirt and brain and in tention. I saw a charming joing girl the other morning diseard a rose because its leaves were a bit withered and its fresh ness just a triffe dimminished by exposure to the air. After the joing girl had gone I carefully gathered up the fallen petals she had left almost as I would have befriended an abandoned baby or lost child, and I thought to myself asl did so, I il wager a cookey that girl would prove fickle in love and inconstant in friendship?

To cast aside a fading rose bespeaks a lighthearted indifference that might lead one to forget the sweetness of a friend when that lover grow pale and worn and tired in the friction of the world a uneven contest with sorrow and want and care. It is the prerogative of youth and beauty to be a little hard and crue! An oil lady would not have thrown away a Jack rose because it had drooped from its first lovelness. Experience broadens and deepens and sweetens the heart of the old and makes them loyal to the friend the lover and the cose of a vanished but unforgotten youth,—Chicago Horald Only a little Thing

A Duel Over a Few Votes
We get a remarkable illustration of what his in Ireland was in 1810, when Messra, Colclough and Sheridan opposed Mr Alcock for the representation of the coun y of Wexford. Several tenants of a persor, supporting Alcock declared that they should vote for the two other candidates. This was resented, and Mr Colclough was called upon to refuse their votes. He declared that he had in no manner canyassed them and that he would not direct them how they should vote. He was answered Receive their votes at your peril."

Before the opening of the next day a polithe rival candidates were on the field to determine the tenants right by the pistol Many hundreds were present. A nong them were several magis rates. The ground was marked. The crowd separated on either side, as their party feelings dictated the word was given and Mr Colclough fell, shot through the heart. WATER WITCHERY.

WHY IT IS THAT SOME PEOPLE ARE ABLE TO DISCOVER WATER The Philosophy of the Divining Rod as Elacidated by a Wiscousin Savant-Six

Bules About Water and How It May He Found-A Striking Case Our modern time screery is water witchery Sleptics are to be confronted on every hand men who laugh at the idea that there is any other way to find a vein of water than to dig for it unbelievers who regard the water philosopher either as a knave or a fool It seems to be a law of self preservation that men will trust in nothing until they have seen it tried time will assimily ass

and again
This fact alone remains undisputed, that there is water beneath. It runs in veins far down below the surface of the earth, in far down below the surface of the earth, in finances that it has worn for itself between the layers of rock and soil. But there is the problem, how is a man to know where the water runs? Must be dig blindly and trust to chance and his own imperfect judgment for successful outcome? Has nature or her God provided a great supply of something so necessary as water, running everywhere in the bowels of the earth, without which man and beast would suffer and all the earth be barren waste and given no otherway to flick the treasure than by hapliazami digging?

One can reasonably expect such a provision it is not, however for even the greatest to judge save by the facts that have been recorded from time to time by mon who have felt enough interest in scientific research to make record. First, hat you can find of the science of divining comes from France. There a man by the name of Bleton made observations, and had the good sense to write upon-paper the progress he bild made. So fur did he discover subterranean veins came to be called Bletonism.

How BINING is not;

For apparatus there is nothing needed but a freshly cut forked switch of peach havel or willow. It must be of the last year's growth so as to be small shim and full of sap. The tapering tipped ends are placed borizontally in the hands. The palms are held above—the forks is brought upward in the skipe of an inverted V, thus A. In the hinds of those for whom it will work—and they are more than one would taink—the forked end will be attracted and stagnant—the road will also be attracted by silver or iron or any other metal that has a liking for electricity.

The moment that the twig comes within the field of the water is not all that can be done is will work—and in spike of all that can be done is entitle the limb is grasped so tightly that the hands turn purple, and the bark is torn the witch will bend. Unseen behind it is a mighty force of nature. At first it points downward at an angle of 45 degs, but as the operator advances the twig begins to strughten.

By the time that the medium reachestle point just over the vein the limb attains its nead slape and points directly up. When the fissure of ore or water is presed the the fissure of ore or water is pussed the twig will point backward and rightfoward the ven. It is in this way not a difficult thing 10 locate the ven. It is a harder will be found. For this there is only one rule that has for its testimonal anything reason be It is known as the 45 dog rule. The distinct from the point where the green twill be place over the vein where this in no way affected as equal to the depth of the vein themeth the surface of the earth A SEFFIC CULFD.

Dr. Adim Clark was one of the worst skeptics on this matter that ever disbelieved As a Wesleyan Methodist preacher, he was sent to the Guernsey islands, in the

He ordered the fellow away and said he would have no such cheat around him. The man however was persistent. A spot was chosen. Water was predicted and water was found trial followed trial and over and over there was the same happy result. Dr. Clark was astonished. As all did not have the power of water philosophy, he concluded in his piety that the faculty was a gift that God had given to some for the benefit of the human race. Dr. Adam Clark lived a hymbred years ago. Before a half century half passed a Wisconsin philosopher had figured out for himself what he call all the laws of divining. They are rounding objects and absorb it themselves, hence where there exist there will be the most extructly in general the human body is also a good conductor but there are some exceptions. Some men usually imbibe the negative and positive in such equal quantities as to maintain an equilibrium in their system is the rod in the hands of such will not be sensibly affected. Others are surcharged inchave more than their share and produce positive electricity. Such it is said if they have black hair, will if rubbed in cold weather emit sparks.

An individual containing a very small amount of electricity or who is highly thought and only such can operate if he takes the rod in his hands and passes over the su face beneath which is a stream of water or a structum of ore by the unchanging la v of a turne the rod must be affected and consequently a sensation will be produced in him who helds it. The person making the experiment is highly negatives of the contendently a bas but little of the making the experiment is highly negative ly charged—that is has but little of the fluid in him

If the experimenter is positively charged, like the water below his system having produced or imbited a large portion of the latent fluid by the law already referred to, latent finish by the few already referred to, there will be no repulsion the twig in stead of bending downward toward the water will beed backward toward him self and the result will be equally perceptible. THE PLEASURES OF TRAVELING:

of the Many Incidents That Go to Make Life on the Cars Pleasant. Make Life on the Carr Pleasact.
There was a man at the Wabash depot the other afternoon who took a five dollar bill out of his vest pocket and spread it out on his knee and attentively examined it.
Then he took it over to the window and held it to a pane of glass and examined it still more critically. Then he went back to his seat and said to the man on his right, to his seat and said to the man on an engin, who had become much interested together with half a lozen others Well, they say there has got to be a first time with everybody but I thought I had traveled far enough to cut my eyeteeth"

"Got stuck, eh?" queried the other as he reached for the bill "Well, you are not so much to blame That bill is pretty well.

'Yes, fair y well, but feel of it. Does it feel like a genuine greenbeck to you?'
'N-o, it doesn't, though I should never have stopped to feel of it. I can see now that it is rougher and coarser'
"They might have passed that off on me in the night," said a second man, who took up the bill, 'but never by daylight. I should have spotted t at once 'Prestry well executed isn t it?" queried the overer.

Pretty well executed isn tit?" queried the owner
'I don't think so The links used were not first class and the printing is bad. I could tell it was queer even if held out at arm's length."
"Counterfeit eb?" said the third man as he took the bill in his hands. Wanl, now I call that pooty well done—pooty well done—pooty well done—pooty well done Id's taken that bill anywhar fur a good one?

He advanced to be window bought a ticket for a town fifty indee down the road, and the ticket man pulled in the bill and made change like chain lightning. Twenty people were watching and each drew a long breath and opened his eyes. The owner of the bill coolly pocketed the change and ticket and calmly sat down and opened a newspaper and began to read. It was some ytime before the croot d tumbled to the fact that it had been guyed. Then one by one they sneaked around or went out for fresh air. All but one.
